Thông tin

Sentence fragments are incomplete sentences or parts of sentences. A complete sentence must contain at least one main or independent clause; however, something is missing (usually a subject or a verb) in a fragment. Therefore, a fragment usually fails to convey a clear message.

EXAMPLE:

1. Because I love you.

It's a fragment because it's a subordinate clause (an adverb clause of reason). It needs a main clause to complete the meaning of the sentence.

-> Because I love you, I do everything for you.

2. For example, the increase in the tuition at the university.

It's a fragment because it has no main verb. It needs a main verb to complete the meaning of the sentence.

-> For example, the increase in the tuition at the university makes more students work part time.

3. Looking at the yellow leaves on the street.

It's a fragment because it is a participial phrase. It has no subject or verb. It needs a subject and a main verb OR a main clause to complete the meaning of the sentence.

-> She is looking at the yellow leaves on the street.

-> Looking at the yellow leaves on the street, she felt really lonely.
